VolCorp Introduces New ALM Platform

4/22/19

NASHVILLE – VolCorp is pleased to announce its new Asset-Liability Management (ALM) platform for credit unions. Introducing re:ALM (Risk Exposure Asset-Liability Management), the new tier-based ALM program that is scalable for all credit unions.

Now with two different tiers of ALM service, re:ALM offers flexibility to credit unions based on the complexity of their balance sheet. re:ALM Connect provides credit unions whose balance sheet is less complex an impressive set of reports and analysis. VolCorp’s ALM team will download the credit union’s 5300 report directly from NCUA, freeing up the time required for data gathering. For those credit unions with more intricate balance sheets, re:ALM Edge takes a more precise approach by uploading detailed data provided by the credit union. As a bonus, re:ALM Edge clients receive additional features such as free commentaries and consulting.

“Asset-liability management is now a commonplace piece of credit union risk control and performance analysis,” said Chris Hartung, VP of ALM with VolCorp. “ALM allows credit unions to conceptually understand balance sheet actions that drive performance and risk and provides for more rational financial management. Regulators know the value of solid ALM management activity. The benefits of a strong ALM program have never been more evident. re:ALM provides a powerful tool for our member credit unions.”
